The Correspondence of Charles Darwin

Volume 5: 1851-1855

Edited by Frederick Burkhardt and Sydney Smith

The correspondence in this volume reveals the two sides of Darwin's life in a new intensity. It opens with the death of Darwin's oldest and best loved daughter, Anne, and goes on to show how he sought relief from his loss through his work, with a single-minded but increasingly weary commitment to the completion of his cirripede monographs. 1990/705 pp./25591-0/Hardcover about $35.00

Reappraisals of the Scientific Revolution

Edited by David C. Lindberg and Robert S. Westman

Broad reflections on the Scientific Revolution from a wide spectrum of scholars actively engaged in the study of sixteenth- and seventeenth-century science are presented in this compendium. The contributors challenge many accepted views and establish interpretations of the Scientific Revolution. 1990/530 pp./34262-7/Hardcover about $59.50

34804-8/Paper about $19.95

The Medical Revolution of the Seventeenth Century

Edited by Roger French and Andrew Wear

The underlying forces that helped to produce a revolution in seventeenth-century medicine are considered in this unique historical study. MEDIEVAL & EARLY RENAISSANCE MEDICINE

An Introduction to Knowledge and Practice

NANCY G. SIRAISS

Following a survey of ancient, early medieval, and Islamic medicine, Siraisi examines the categories and conditions of medical practice in the twelfth to fifteenth centuries. The development of medical education, knowledge of physiology and anatomy, concepts of disease, and therapies including surgery are treated with attention to the diverse nature of the medical community, the growing professionalization of medicine, and the codification of medical practice. Illustrations complement the text, which has been written to meet the needs of students and of scholars from other fields.
