Description with Expected Results:

The annual meeting of the American Association of the History of Medicine, which includes both an in-person and a virtual component, offers an opportunity for scholars and practitioners to come together to explore and discuss the ways in which history can be used as a critical lens to assess and improve medical practice and culture. After completing this activity, participants will routinely compare and apply information about the full range of historical contingencies, including social, cultural, political, economic, and individual factors, of the structure and function of contemporary medical practice and our current health care system (both the US and around the world).

ACCME Statement:

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the accreditation requirements and policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) through the joint providership of the University of Michigan Medical School and the [name of the organization]. The University of Michigan Medical School is accredited by the ACCME to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The University of Michigan Medical School designates this live activity for a maximum of XX AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™]. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
